LEAN STARTUP

- Lean simply put - is a business that maximises value while minimising waste
- The term Lean Startup was coined by Eric Ries, in a book named the same.
- The core idea is to avoid waste of time and resources when developing a new product or service.
- This method advocates developing products that consumers have already demonstrated they desire so that a market will already exist as soon as the product is launched.
- Approach to building new businesses based on the belief that entrepreneurs must investigate, experiment, test and iterate as they develop products.
- The company begins by getting to the market to ask the opinion of potential customers about all elements of the business model: product features, price, distribution channels and economic strategies. With this data collected, the startup creates a minimum viable product (MVP) and ask for customer feedback as quickly as possible. Based on the answers obtained, it aims for new versions and adjusts until it finds the ideal product.

Types of MVP

- Video MVP: Explain the concept and ask people to sign up.
- Concierge MVP: Do everything yourself to create an awesome personalized experience. Caution – you need to have a growth model, otherwise, you might become satisfied with a small profitable business when a pivot may have lead to more significant growth.
- Wizard of Oz MVP: Simulate the technology you would need to develop by doing it yourself behind the scenes while you test your assumptions.

Hires mostly who are eager to learn	Hires on basis of academics & experience
